1. Field of the Invention The present invention relates to a cylindrical lens which is to be used for a photographing lens system employed in a camera which is applied to, for example, silver-salt photography, a camera having a built-in electronic flash device, a video camera, etc., a camera having a built-in image-pickup device, etc., as well as to an illuminating optical system employing the cylindrical lens as the last element of a lighting optical system for a projector, a high definition television, etc. 2. Description of the Related Art With a camera which is applied to silver-salt photography, such as a camera mounted on a mobile phone, there is a growing demand for reduction in size and thickness. Accordingly, there has been an eager desire for a construction in which lenses of a plurality of functions are integrally formed, so that the height of the overall optical system can be reduced. One of the examples of such a lens construction is an integrally formed construction in which lenses of a wide-angle lens function, a macro lens function, and a telescopic lens function are integrally formed. This lens construction is disclosed in U.S. Pat. No. 4,818,986 and JP-A-11-157127. In the construction disclosed in U.S. Pat. No. 4,818,986, for a high-magnification macro lens and a wide-angle lens, which are to be used in combination, the diameter of a lens is made smaller than that of a normal lens, and an aspheric surface is formed. However, it is not possible to employ the construction in a lens intended for use in a camera since the diameter of the lens needs to be particularly small. Therefore, this lens construction is not suitable for a lens of a telecentric system. In JP-A-11-157127, a wide-angle lens of the optical system is constructed from a first lens having negative power, a second lens having negative power and a third lens having positive power. Further, in JP-A-11-157127, the design examples of the third lens are disclosed. However, it is not possible to construct a zoom lens by combining such three lenses. In addition, although the diameter of the lens and the number of lenses are reduced, the power of the first lens is strong. Accordingly, when a power variation is carried out, the diameter of the overall optical system
