Each time I use the Windows built-in text editor, I want to be able to open and save documents in the OpenDocument format, if I can. I already know that I can do it with OpenOffice 3, but I don't remember how (and I'm happy to forget). If I just enter text into a blank document, it asks if I want to open it in OpenDocument format, but if I then want to save it, the only thing I can find is to save it as a Word.doc file. There's no way to save it as OpenDocument directly. ... I need to be able to use Apple's new World Clock app with CloudKit calendar items from my iPhone. I can get it to work with an old-school service like Google, but I'd rather use CloudKit. I've tried several guides, but nothing is working. I've tried adding a new calendar item using both app-specific and shared calendar items. Nothing. I've tried using global and app-specific keys, and nothing. I tried adding events using both app-specific and shared calendars, and nothing. I tried using push notifications for the events, but nothing. When trying to get events, I see this message in my Console: com.apple.developer.calendar.364418793: Request failed com.apple.developer.permission-
