The first step in building a website is to create the basic look of the home page. Let's take a look at the steps you need to take to create a web page. 1. Open a new document and use the Text tool to draw a rectangle on the canvas where you want your header to appear. You can create the height and width of your page using the buttons on the Attributes panel, but I tend to set these values to the height of the screen. The width can be the width of the viewable area of the browser (minus any navigation bar or frame). Photoshop doesn't offer a setting for the text height in its canvas. You can set the text size, but you can't set the size of individual characters. 2. In the Layers panel, click the text layer, and then change its color to white. All text layers on a web page will display the color set in the current color scheme. 3. In the Arrange panel on the right side of the screen, click the icon for Align to Selection. This aligns the text with the bottom, left edge of the window. Now that the text is on the page, you need to add a photo or graphic to it to create

Force-free comparison of mean-field and hydro- and magnetohydrodynamic models for zonal flows. The force-free model of Bifrost is compared to the hybrid mean-field/Boussinesq and the two magnetohydrodynamic models of SpaceHorse. For the same set of input parameters, the two hybrid models produce a zonal flow of the same orientation, but the resistive effect on the zonal flow is larger in SpaceHorse than in Bifrost. Bifrost, however, produces a faster and more organized zonal flow compared with both hybrid models. The strength of the zonal flow is somewhat overestimated in all models. The model with the lowest thermal diffusivity in the outer regions (i.e., in the slow solar wind) shows the strongest zonal flow.Q: jquery.load error I'm making my first webpage using ajax, following the first steps on this site I got to this point: $(document).ready(function(){ $("#navform").load("navbar.html"); }); And got this error: "navbar.html" does not exist in the current context All I'm trying to do is load a using ajax and then displaying it, instead of it replacing the whole page. A: The div with navbar.html id doesn't exist in your html. You'll want to do: $("#navform").load("navbar.html"); ...and ... instead. If you're using jQuery.load, you want to retrieve the page it was told to load. So that's where navbar.html comes in. The.load() method, unlike $.get(), allows us to specify a portion of the remote document to be loaded (as either the function body or a DOM fragment). It is intended to be used in tandem with $.get() to handle multiple

Distributed generation (DG) is a major component of national policy objectives. Recent projections for electric energy usage in the U.S. indicate that generation capacity will remain essentially constant through 2015, with a very small decline (only one percent) during 2004. Of the projected increase in electric energy use, power plants will supply approximately 93% of the new generation, including that generated by DG. The purpose of this study is to estimate DG costs, in terms of the retail price of electricity, and the extent to which these costs are transferred to electricity consumers. The model used for this analysis consists of a detailed evaluation of a single unit of distributed generation with the results of a particular macroeconomic model. Data sources include 1) National Energy Technology Laboratory (NETL) technical and economic studies, 2) the North American Electric Reliability Corporation (NERC), 3) the Energy Information Administration (EIA), and 4) private market studies. The estimated cost is $4,133 for a single 1.0 MWe distributed generation system, with residential pricing rising as a function of output level to an average of $1,895 for 1.0 MWe on peak production, but declining to only $1,570 at 0.2 MWe/peak. DOE is committed to supporting the economic development of rural America. As the country's leading resource for finding solutions to environmental problems, the Department collaborates with communities, environmental groups, academia, and business to develop, demonstrate and scale up technologies that will reduce the generation, use and release of pollutants.How to install the latest version of Firefox Mozilla released the latest version of Firefox, ESR 45, but it's actually not the latest version. There is a difference between Nightly builds and the latest ESR version. The latest ESR version is ESR 45. In other words, Firefox ESR 45 is the latest version of the test builds. The Nightly version, also known as Aurora, is the most updated version of Firefox that you can get directly from Mozilla. This is the version where development is still going on, so it will almost always be more up to date than the ESR versions. Installing the latest version of Firefox Firefox can be downloaded from Mozilla's website. You can choose to download it from the beginning with the three level versions of the browser or download it from the latest version. Here's how to install the latest
