Using the method of intraluminal registration of gastric contractions, it is shown that the gastric response pattern and its motor components exhibit considerable individual differences in healthy persons and in patients with organic and functional gastroduodenal pathology. A significant change of the gastric response pattern is recorded in patients after cholecystectomy. It is the motility component responsible for the scintigraphic registration of the response.Q: TikZ: How to draw a specific tikz rectangle? I'm trying to draw a specific tikz rectangle using only tikz. I mean that when I use the coordinates (x,y) the tikz rectangle is always centered with a distance between both parts equal to the rectangle's width. The code is : `\documentclass[12pt]{article} \usepackage{tikz} \begin{document} \begin{tikzpicture} \draw[rounded corners,fill=blue!20] (0,-2.5) rectangle (6,6); \end{tikzpicture} \end{document}` In tikz I've tried to add coordinates using $x=0$ and $y=0$ but it doesn't work. If someone can help me I'll be thankful. A: Do not use $(0,-2.5)$ as the coordinates. The coordinates are defined in the parentheses. You can choose e.g. $(1.5,-2)$ and the rectangle will be centered in the middle of the picture. `\documentclass[12pt]{article} \usepackage{tikz} \begin{document} \begin{tikzpicture} \draw[rounded corners,fill=blue!20] (1.5,-2) rectangle (6,6); \end{tikzpicture} \end{document}` Update: If you want to
