How to do it? A: First convert the data to a tabular format by saving it as.txt file. Then run this line in command prompt: `awk -F'|' '{for (i=1;i<length($0);i++) printf "%s\t", $i; printf "%s\n", $0;}' input.txt` Where '|' is the separator and other text of the file is also coming along with the output. This would give the output in the following format
`"|this|is|the|text|file", "|this|is|the|other|text"`, A: I would suggest doing it through sed. Something like this: `$ sed -r 's/|.*|/g' input.txt "|this|is|the|text|file", "|this|is|the|other|text"` The sed -r switch tells sed to interpret backslash escapes as regular characters. The sed -r switch isn't necessary if the file is only going to have single quotes around things.
