Participants stood with their arms crossed on their chest while the targets' distance was varied between 80 and 230 cm in order to elicit visually guided central force compensation in 5-s intervals. The visual target consisted of either the same target stimulus as that used to elicit central force compensation in an earlier study, or a different target. Fixation of one target was associated with shifts of the center of pressure from the unperturbed side to the perturbed one. In line with a role of visual fixation in central force compensation, shifts in the center of pressure to the nonfixated side were smaller and faster, 1cdb3666d
